R. Campbell Thompson led four archaeological expeditions to Nineveh on behalf of the British Museum between 1927 and 1932. During these four seasons (1927-8, 1929-30, 1930-1 and 1931-2) a large number of items bearing cuneiform inscriptions — almost exclusively royal (tablets, prisms, clay cones, bricks, etc.) — were discovered at the site and Thompson made many of these available to the scholarly world in a series of publications. Since he published most of these before they had been accessioned into museum collections, only rarely are the museum numbers given. For this reason it has often been difficult to locate them. The publication in 1968 of the second supplement to the catalogue of the Kuyunjik collection in the British Museum by W.G. Lambert and A.R. Millard facilitated matters since it included many of the Thompson pieces. However, because this work did not have a reverse index arranged by place of publication one was required to hunt through the whole volume in order to discover if any particular piece was to be found in it. In his review of the work in OlZ 68 (1973) pp.34-6, R. Borger provided such a reverse index, thus greatly aiding the searcher. Since that time, a number of other pieces have been located and identified by scholars, in particular by A.R. George among the texts in the collection of the Birmingham City Museum and by C.B.F. Walker among the bricks in the British Museum.

In 1981, while the author was working with the Old and Middle Assyrian royal inscriptions in the British Museum for the Royal Inscriptions of Mesopotamia Project, six boxes of sikkatu fragments from Thompson's excavations at Nineveh were brought to his attention by Walker. Although five boxes bore the label 1932-12-10 and one 1929-10-12, the individual pieces had never been registered or given BM numbers. An examination of the pieces showed that approximately fifty of them had been published by Thompson. In view of the identification of these pieces (and of several others communicated to me by J.E. Reade and C.B.F. Walker) and the fact that at present one must search through several publications in order to determine if any particular Thompson piece has been located, it has been thought useful to present here an index of the pieces copied by Thompson.1 Many texts can still not be located; however, it has been decided to list these here in order that the reader might add the pertinent information as more identifications are made. Persons knowing the present whereabouts of additional pieces are kindly requested to communicate the information to the author so that addenda to this index may be presented in some future issue of the Annual Review.

The texts are arranged here according to their place of publication and by the number assigned to them by Thompson. Where a composite copy has been presented, the individual exemplars are cited according to their findspots. For pieces in the British Museum, both the modern BM number and the older registration number is given if both are known. Only the first plate and page upon which a text is first copied and/or discussed by Thompson is cited; however, if it is discussed on non-continuous pages both are given. The following abbreviations are used in order to indicate that the piece is catalogued or discussed in the respective work:

W: C.B.F. Walker, Cuneiform Brick Inscriptions in the British Museum, the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford, the City of Birmingham Museums and Art Gallery, the City of Bristol Museum and Art Gallery (London 1981). [The numbers following the W indicate the number of the inscription under which the piece is recorded in Walker's book.]

In the last column is given either the name of the king (abbreviated) for whom the text was composed (in the case of royal inscriptions) or the genre of the inscription.

This index is intended merely to serve as a tool for locating texts found by Thompson's excavations at Nineveh. Helpful in the preparation of this index. A list of the uninscribed pieces from Thompson's excavations at Nineveh is being prepared by Reade.

1I would like to express my thanks to J.E. Reade and C.B.F. Walker of the British Museum for their advice and help in the preparation of this index.
Nineveh and subsequently copied by him. For more complete information on the pieces the reader must consult the three works mentioned above and R. Borger's Handbuch der Keilschriftliteratur.

It is worth noting here that at least two of the pieces did not come from Nineveh. Nos. 72 and 93 of Archaeologia 79 (1929) pl. 79 and 80 are stated to have come from 'Tag, near Ain Sefna' and 'Beisan, about 1 hour's walk N. of Kouyunjik, left bank', respectively.
